ABSTRACT

This research paper sheds the light on the component of sentence in English grammar, the research investigates all the parts of sentences in English grammar including; subject, predicate, auxiliary verbs, primary verbs, completers, transitive verbs, objective and all the types of clauses in English grammar. The aim of research is for the learners to learn all the components of English grammar as the component of communication in any language is a sentence. The finding of research shows that syntax is a major component of English grammar, syntax gives power to words to carry the meaning in the form of sentences. Both morphology and syntax are related to each other. Morphology deals with internal structure of words whereas Syntax deals with the structure of sentences. As words are important for a language, sentences are also important. Sentence structure is vital in both speaking and writing. Even a word is not properly used in a sentence, the whole sentence will be wrong. Learning how to write and speak good sentences is the key to your success
